What you need to know about concussion:

- A concussion is an injury to the brain that disturbs its normal functioning.
- Concussion can be caused by a bump to the head or a blow to the body.
- Concussion may occur during practices or games in any sport.
- Concussion does not always result in, or from, a loss of consciousness.

All concussions are serious.

- Recognition and proper management of concussions when they first occur can help prevent further injury or even death.
- Signs and symptoms of a concussion may be apparent right after the injury, but in some instances, the symptoms may not present for hours or days following the initial injury.

To reduce concussion risk:

- Ensure all athletes follow the safety rules and rules of the sport
- Practice good sportsmanship at all times
- Make sure the proper protective equipment is worn and fitted correctly, and maintained properly
- Review the signs and symptoms of a concussion before every sports season

If a concussion is suspected:

- Do not ignore the symptoms of a head injury.
- Seek medical attention right away.
- Stay out of play to allow the brain to heal and to help avoid permanent brain damage.
- Make sure coaches and parents are aware of any concussion injury.
- Allow time for rest to help the brain heal. (Sleeping is permitted ensuring the athlete can be awakened.)
- Avoid taking pain medications soon after a concussion to keep from covering up symptoms.
- Modifications also may need to be made at school and can be directed by your healthcare provider

Prevent long-term problems:

- Do not play with a concussion. Discourage athletes from pressuring injured athletes to play and persuade athletes to admit if they are not "just fine."
- Avoid repeat concussion. Concussions that occur before the brain recovers from a first concussion can result in long term conditions:
- Proper recognition and management of a sports concussion can allow athletes to safely participate in sports they enjoy. Remember – "If in doubt, sit out!"
